The History of Man

The early man used to live in jungles like many other animals. His life was very tough. He lived in dark caves to protect himself from wild animals. He used to eat whatever was available in the jungles. He ate fruits and leaves of trees. Sometimes, he would kill small animals and birds and ate their flesh raw.

Since food was not available at one place, he moved about from one place to another in search of food.

Early men had no clothes to wear. He used to wear the skins of animals or barks of trees. The early man ate fruits, roots and raw flesh of animals. He did not know that food could be cooked.

The discovery of fire was an important happening in the life of the early man.
